

Natalia Di Pietrantonio is an Assistant Curator of South Asian Art at the Seattle Asian Art Museum. Before joining SAAM, she held postdoctoral positions at the Bard Graduate Center as the Islamic Art and Material Culture Fellow and at Scripps College as the Consortium for Faculty Diversity Fellow. She has recent and forthcoming publications in Modern Asian Studies, Journal18, and Scripps Asian Treasures Catalog. She completed her bachelor's at the University of California-Davis, masters at Columbia University, and received a masters and doctoral degree from Cornell University. Her dissertation at Cornell University focused on Indian miniature painting and modern collecting practices of South Asian book arts. Her research has been supported by the Metropolitan Museum of Art, American Institute of Indian Studies, American Institute of Pakistan Studies, Historians of Islamic Art Association, and the Institute of Historical Research-Mellon.